21 & 22 June 2023 (Wednesday & Thursday), 9.00 am - 5.00 pm

A Comprehensive Review of Latest Developments in MFRS

The high quality, internationally accepted financial reporting standards—International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS)—are getting more complex, rapidly evolving and dynamic. This is in tandem with the market place being more globalised, businesses getting more complex, and financial transactions becoming more innovative.

The International Accounting Standards Board (IASB) has many research projects, standard-setting related projects, discussion papers and exposure drafts in place at any one time. Hence, as new IFRSs are developed, old IASs are replaced, while amendments (one-off and annual) have been made to existing IFRSs. As the MFRS is in full convergence with the IFRS, it is as dynamic as the IFRS.

This programme provides a comprehensive review of the latest developments in MFRS—both new and amendments to existing—taking effect from 1 January 2018 to 1 January 2023. It focusses on the key reporting principles of the newly issued MFRS, the financial reporting issues the new MFRS intended to address and how they do so. It also evaluates the potential impact of the newly issued MFRS on existing reporting practices. These discussions and evaluation also include the key amendments made to the MFRS.

As business environment becomes dynamic and financial performance highly volatile, it is imperative for accounting and finance professionals to be kept up to date with the changes to these reporting standards.

OBJECTIVES

This programme seeks to help you:

- Evaluate the rationales for amendments and issuance of new MFRSs
- Assess how the amendments and new MFRSs would address the financial reporting issues
- Assess the impacts of such amendments and new MFRSs
- Evaluate the basic concepts and principles of the new MFRSs
- Interpret and apply the amended and new reporting principles
